

McRae Stephenson, a Kentucky native, possesses a passion for philanthropy, experience in community outreach, a driven approach to research, and a willingness to build and grow relationships that strengthen an organization's funding strategies. She earned her Juris Doctor from the University of Louisville after spending a year as an AmeriCorps National Service Member. Prior to that, she received a Bachelor's degree in Applied Music, Voice Performance, from Transylvania University in Lexington, KY.

McRae most recently maintained a private law practice in central Kentucky, where she focused on family, corporate, and estate law. She spent five years in Higher Education as Director of Corporate and Foundation Relations for the Marshall University Foundation, Inc., and afterward worked as a nonprofit consultant, advising non-profits on federal and state grant administration and compliance. Her legal work includes time as a university professor of Paralegal Studies and as a Research Solutions Consultant for LexisNexis, serving the Kentucky large law market. McRae is relocating to Decatur with her husband Chris Tudor, their three children, Madeline (age 12), Jonah (age 8), Elliott (age 6), and a neurotic terrier named Jane.